

the back door. But the smoke was thicker there, and she realised she was heading towards the fire. She ran back up the corridor. The alarm was ringing loudly and it hurt her ears. She pulled Mr Joseph's arm and pointed up the stairs.

Joanna covered her ears as she ran up the stairs, across the stage and out of the front door of the building. The schoolyard was starting to fill up with students.

the back door. But the smoke was thicker there, and she realised she was heading towards the fire. She ran back up the corridor. The alarm was ringing loudly and it hurt her ears. She pulled Mr Joseph's arm and pointed up the stairs.

Joanna covered her ears as she ran up the stairs, across the stage and out of the front door of the building. The schoolyard was starting to fill up with students.

